RONA HIRES THE LABATON FIRM

29. Upon information and belief, in June 2001, RONA consulted Jeffrey A. Galant ("Galant") and/or Anne Farber ("Farber") of the law firm Goodkind Labaton Rudoff & Sucharow, LLP (the "Labaton firm") for the purpose of obtaining title to and securing control over the decedent's assets.

30. Upon information and belief, shortly thereafter, under Rona's direction, Farber began preparing documents for the purpose of giving Rona control over the decedent's assets.

31. Upon information on or about June 28, 2001, the Labaton firm sent via facsimile a proposed retainer agreement to Rona for both Rona and the decedent to sign which, among other things, contained a provision waiving any conflict of interest.

32. Upon information and belief, according to notes kept by Farber in the ordinary course of business, Rona told Farber that upon receipt of the proposed retainer agreement on June 29, 2001, the decedent objected to it as unnecessary and refused to sign it.

33. Upon information and belief, notwithstanding the decedent's objection, and without the decedent's knowledge or consent, Rona forged the decedent's name to the retainer agreement (Exhibit "A") and signed her own name.

34. Upon information and belief, on or about July 3, 2001, according to notes kept by Farber in the ordinary course of business, Rona represented to Farber that "[the decedent] signed the engagement letter. . ." and that it was in the mail.

35. On December 10, 2007, Forensic Document Examiner, Detective Richard T.

Picciochi, Ret., a 22-year veteran of the Police Department of the City of New York responsible for training and supervising personnel in the Questioned Document Unit, determined that the decedent's signature on the June 28, 2001 retainer agreement was forged, probably by Rona. A copy of Detective Picciochi's report and credentials is annexed hereto as Exhibit "B."

36. Upon information and belief, subsequent to delivering the forged retainer agreement, Rona continued to interact with the attorneys at the Labaton firm to prepare legal documents relating to the decedent's House, Apartment and retirement funds.

37. At the request of Rona, the decedent paid the legal fees of the Labaton firm for the aforesaid work.

THE EXECUTION OF ESTATE PLANNING DOCUMENTS

38. Upon information and belief, on or about July 11, 2001 at a meeting at the Labaton firm offices, Rona and attorneys at the Labaton firm informed the decedent that documents were prepared giving Rona a life estate in the Apartment and House for the purpose of financial and estate tax planning to save income taxes and inheritance taxes.

39. Upon information and belief, pursuant to the aforesaid representations and Rona's promises to cease her abusive behavior, among other documents, the decedent executed a document entitled "The Jack E. Maurer July 11, 2001 Agreement" (hereinafter, the "Agreement") dated July 11, 2001 consisting of five numbered pages with an additional execution page, annexed hereto as Exhibit "C".

40. Among the documents which Rona's attorneys presented to the decedent was an agreement limiting his right to withdraw from his IRA account which was then held by Smith Barney. The Agreement also provided that upon his death all of the proceeds would go to Rona however should she predecease him, he was still not free to withdraw the funds and upon his death the remainder was required to go to the issue of his marriage to Rona to the exclusion of his daughter from his first marriage, Lisa Bishop. The significance of this Agreement to the pending case is that after its execution, the decedent executed the beneficiary designation under which the defendants in this lawsuit have made their claims. Said designation is annexed hereto as Exhibit "D".

41. At that time of the execution of Exhibit "C" the decedent was in poor health, was physically and mentally weak and was completely dependent on those around him.

42. At that time of the execution of Exhibit "C" as a result of his physical and emotional condition, the decedent was frightened and was susceptible to being easily influenced.

43. Upon information and belief, the representations made as to the purposes of the Agreement were false when made and were made to induce the decedent, among other things, to limit his access to his life savings.

44. Upon information and belief, after his execution of the Agreement, the decedent became aware that it restricted his right to change beneficiaries of the IRA or ESOP.

45. Upon information and belief, it was never the decedent's intention to limit his ability to change beneficiaries of his IRA or ESOP.

46. Upon information and belief, after the execution of the Agreement, the decedent became aware that they were not planned or prepared in furtherance of financial or estate tax planning objectives, but rather solely for the benefit of Rona.

47. Upon information and belief, subsequent to the execution of the Agreement, Rona objected to the decedent obtaining from the Labaton firm copies of the file documents related to the preparation and execution of Exhibit "C".

48. Upon information and belief, by reason of his age, poor physical condition and fears associated with his declining mental condition, the Rona took unfair advantage of, and exercised undue influence over the decedent.

THE SIGNIFICANCE OF RONA'S FORGERY OF THE RETAINER AGREEMENT

49. Upon information and belief, as a result of Rona's forgery and deceit, the attorneys at the Labaton firm:

- a. were led to believe that the decedent executed the retainer agreement and conflict waiver therein,
- b. failed to take into consideration adequately the decedent's age, health, memory and his unwillingness to transfer his assets as previously reported to it by Rona and Nicole,
- c. failed to take into consideration adequately the contentious relationship between Rona and the decedent, as reported to it by Rona and Nicole,
- d. failed to meet with the decedent as a prospective client of the Labaton firm prior to the execution of the Agreement,
- e. failed to adequately communicate with the decedent,
- f. failed to adequately disclose in advance the significance of the conflict waiver provision in the retainer agreement with the decedent and the implications of dual representation,
- g. failed to speak with the decedent on the telephone prior to the execution of the Agreement,

- h. failed to make an assessment whether the decedent's reasonable financial needs could be met given the restrictions contained in the Agreement,
- i. failed to send a draft or summary of the proposed agreements to the decedent prior to the execution of the Agreement,
- j. did not contact the decedent's attorney, Alan Kroll, Esq. to determine in what capacity he represented the decedent,
- k. accepted as true, and acted upon, all of the statements and directions of Rona,
- l. did not discern that Rona was hostile to the decedent,
- m. did not discern that Rona was conniving to take absolute title and control of the decedent's property to the detriment of their issue,

50. In summary, upon information and belief, Rona's forgery of the retainer agreement was essential for the execution of the Agreement. Absent her wrongdoing, it would not have been signed. Her forgery deprived the decedent of the independent representation to which he was entitled.

WHEREFORE, defendants respectfully request the following relief:

- (1) judgment dismissing Rona Maurer's cross-claims with costs and disbursements awarded to the answering defendants, and
- (2) that an order be issued directing the plaintiff to distribute to LISA M. BISHOP, SHIRLEY WATSTEIN and POH C. TAY the amounts due to hem pursuant to the beneficiary designations together with interest, costs and disbursements; and granting such other and further relief as may be just and proper.
